Introduction to this Church and Layouts document

This short document contains some information on St. Leonard's Church history, the survey of monumental inscriptions that was carried out in 2014, and in particular layouts which can help the reader to locate a particular memorial should that be of interest.

To locate St. Leonard's it is recommended to access the church's own website at www.parishofheston.co.uk/home. This write-up continues with a brief history of the church and its churchyard, and a short section on the survey itself. It is then followed by a recent photograph of the church, and by a set of layouts which will enable the reader to find the actual location of any memorial using the reference number assigned to each inscription.

Church History

The following description is mostly taken from British History Online. There has been a church at Heston since the time of the Norman Conquest. It was originally part of the Manor of Isleworth until a separate manor was established in the 13th century. In 1865 Heston church consisted of an aisled nave, chancel, north and south chapels, west tower, west and south porches, and a north porch then used as a vestry. There was apparently a Norman arch in the chancel and other parts of the building dating from the 13th century, but most of it seems to have been of the late 15th century. In 1865 the building was in bad repair and was considered too small, while the lowness of the chancel arch was said to impede the voice during communion services. The chancel arch was also partly blocked by a three-decker pulpit, while high pews stretched through the arch into the chancel. In spite of protests from outside the parish the church was therefore rebuilt, apart from the tower, to the designs of Thomas Bellamy. It is built of ragstone, mainly in the Decorated style and on the same general plan as the old church except for an additional north aisle. Efforts were evidently made to perpetuate some of the original features, including the separate gabled roofs of the chancel and chapels at the east end. The arcade dividing the two north aisles appears to incorporate some original late-13th-century stonework. The late-15th-century west porch, which is built of timber on a stone base, was also apparently reconstructed from the original materials. The tower is square and four-storied with an embattled parapet. The west door and the stoup beside it, like the tower, are of the 15th century. The lych-gate is a 19th-century reconstruction from materials of the 15th or early 16th century.

The Churchyard and Memorials

The churchyard is very extensive, and reputed to be the largest churchyard in the country. It has grown to be the size it is by a series of extensions. For the purposes of presentation in this document the churchyard has been split into sections labelled from 'A' to 'R', using the available paths as section boundaries. See the Overview Layout for the location of each section. Within this scheme the labelling of the sections runs from the original older sections through to the more recent extensions.

The original churchyard, known as the 'Old Ground', consists of a normal-sized churchyard which surrounds the church. The area is shaded in on the Overview Layout. The first extension was by the purchase of the land forming the remainder of Sections E and F in 1861. The next extension was the areas labelled Section G, H, I and J, purchased in 1876; then came the main eastwards expansion to the areas labelled Section K, L, M, N and O, purchased in 1904; and the final extension was to the north-west to the areas labelled Section P, Q and R, purchased in 1939.

The area now set aside as the Garden of Remembrance was created as such in about 1950, and required moving a number of memorials from the area. 29 of the headstones were built in to the stone wall which surrounds the Garden of Remembrance. Some are now impossible to read, but most have survived well, and are duly included here in Section A. Section B, to the south of the church, used to extend a bit further south west than is the case today (see the Layout Overview), and the headstones which had to be moved are now lined up against the southern wall of the churchyard in that section.

The oldest memorial within the church is a floor slab, CH71, to the memory of Thomas Bownell who died in 1570. From the churchyard the oldest memorial is a flat stone, B8, to the memory of Daniel Cole who died in 1685. This survey includes all memorials associated with St. Leonard's, numbering 87 from the church itself, 4467 gravestones in the churchyard, and a further 783 cremation stones or other memorials in the Garden of Remembrance.

Referencing

Wherever possible the graves have been given their proper 'grave reference'. Graves from the 'Old Ground' areas do not have a proper reference, but all graves from the newer areas have been assigned burial plot references according to a grid numbering system. The numbering does have its quirks, in that having used up all the row numbers a to z, new rows were then numbered aa to zz, and when yet further rows had to be added, the rows were called 1br, 2br etc, and this process was repeated at both the east end of the churchyard, and to the west end, so some rows like 1br, 2br actually occur twice. The 'br' is assumed to be short for 'back row', as first one, then another 'back row' was filled with burial plots. The duplication of grave references does not cause any confusion in this document as each reference is here prefixed with the Section label (CH for Church, and then A to R for the remaining sections). The column numbering of the graves also had its problems, and we find column '0' added just before column '1', and then column '00' added just before column '0'.

Some rows in the churchyard, near the paths, have been given special names. The graves on either side of the main north-south path called The Long Walk were also labelled 'lw' for Long Walk. In similar manner the graves on the west side of May Tree Walk, in Section H, were labelled 'mtw', and in the same section, the next row in, the graves were labelled 'sr', which stands for Soldiers Row. A bit further to the north, the continuation of May Tree Walk was also the western border of the churchyard when burials were being made there, and the eastern row of sections Q and R is actually labelled 'wb' standing for Western Border.

While the layout of all the new sections follows the grid numbering system, there are a few cases where graves have been found 'out of position', usually just by one grave plot. It is assumed that this has occurred as a result of additional burials in the plot, for which it is necessary to move the memorial to one side before completing the second burial. It appears that the memorial has not always been moved back to its proper location. These cases have been assigned their original grave reference, but are shown on the layouts as they were found in 2014.

While for the most part the graves follow the grid layout in a regular way, there are parts of the churchyard where the rows and columns do not line up as one would expect. Section K includes an example of this, where uneven spacing has led to the addition of two 'extra' columns, which were called columns '9a' and '9b'. Perhaps as the converse of the above, in Section P it may be noted that there are rows uu and ww, but there is no row vv.

Within the Garden of Remembrance the Cremation stones are also laid out according to their own numbered grid.

Notes to the Inscriptions

The main objective of this document is simply to record the actual inscriptions on the gravestones, and to provide a surname index to enable fast access to the gravestones for a given surname. However, in some cases the memorial refers just to the loved one's nickname, such as 'Jimmy', without providing their full name or surname, or there may be no mention of the date of death. Where possible these extra details have been obtained, usually from the Grave or Burial Registers, and have been added to the memorial inscription record by way of a note.

This survey of the gravestones at Heston is not the first undertaken by the Society. The first survey was undertaken in 1981. It is not certain whether all graves were examined, but the significant majority were. However, the typed pages were never put together as a finished document, so remained as a work-in-progress. The project was revisited by Society members, led by Mrs. Wendy Mott, in 1992, during which time the typed pages were reviewed for completeness, and various corrections were made, but again, likely due to the sheer scale of the project, the work was never completed as a finished document. However, the typed and corrected pages were preserved, and have formed the core for this final work to produce the required document. In particular, the previous work undertaken some 30 years ago has provided some gravestone readings that are simply not possible as of 2014. Mostly this has been a word here or there, but in a few cases it amounts to a complete reliance on the earlier reading of the gravestone. Where this has occurred a note has been provided to the effect.

This is not by any means the only document providing detail of the gravestones at Heston. Local historian Lynda Hardy has produced several books relating to the memorials. In particular she has included digitally enhanced photos of particular gravestones, and has provided considerable additional detail on the lives of the individuals named on the stones. Lynda has particularly focussed on the many soldiers who are buried at Heston, but not exclusively so. Titles of the relevant books by Lynda Hardy, which should be available by contacting Heston Parish Office (see website) are:

'Heston Histories: The Vanishing Graves of St. Leonard's Churchyard'.

'The Military Graves of St. Leonard's, Heston – Volume I. Victorian & Georgian Military Graves'.

'The Military Graves of St. Leonard's, Heston – Volume II. The Great Wars'.

'The Military Graves of St. Leonard's, Heston – Volume III. The War Memorial'.

'The Military Graves of St. Leonard's, Heston – Volume IV. Casualties and Veterans'.

Acknowledgements

The Society thanks Roland Bostock for collecting the inscriptions and preparing this document, and also Brian Page for his proof reading contribution, and recognises the work of the previous members of the Society who collected the inscriptions in 1981 and 1992, in particular Mrs. Wendy Mott.

The Society gives a special thank-you to Mrs. Lynda Hardy, author of the books referred to above, who also provided massive assistance to Roland to identify the individuals referred to on some of the more oblique, and therefore interesting, inscriptions.

Finally the Society thanks the Revd. David Coleman, Vicar of St. Leonard's, Miss Sue Hoad, parish secretary, and Lawson Cockcroft, parish archivist for providing access to the church and churchyard, and for their general support for this project.
